Dr. Georges Benjamin, Executive Director, American Public Health Association

Dr. Georges Benjamin is the executive director of the American Public Health Association, leading the association’s push to make America the healthiest nation in one generation. Previously, Benjamin served as secretary of the Maryland Department of Health and Mental Hygiene where he oversaw the expansion and improvement of the state’s Medicaid program. An established administrator, author and orator, Benjamin began his medical career in 1981 as chief of the Acute Illness Clinic at the Madigan Army Medical Center in Tacoma, Washington. He then served as chief of emergency medicine at the Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, D.C., before chairing the Department of Community Health and Ambulatory Care at the District of Columbia General Hospital. He was then promoted to acting commissioner for public health for the District of Columbia. Benjamin has authored more than 100 scientific articles and book chapters and serves on the boards of many organizations.
